pean nations in working out their financial difficulties under the Dawes plan.

There seems reason to believe that at the present time a majority of the members of the debt commission are not yet ready to declare themselves for the scheme advanced by Mr. Hugley. Even if the seven members of the commission were willing to approve the plan it would be necessary to obtain the sanction of Congress and it is doubted if Congress would be willing in the near future to go as far in making concessions as proposed by Mr. Hurley.

The proposal of Mr. Hurley that under a basis of the payment annually by France of $1000.000.000 half of the amount be reinvested by the United States each year in French industrial bonds undoubtedly will cause much discussion and will be opposed by many in Congress. In effect the United States government would be reloaning half of the payments to France. While ostensibly the plan provides for the retirement of the $3.500.000.000 debt in a maximum of sixty-seven years, the reinvestment of part of the money in twenty-five-year French industrial bonds would mean that the last of the bonds would not mature until twenty-five years after the end of the sixty-seven-year period, or ninety-two years from the date of he agreement.

The proposed investment of gov rnment funds in bonds secured by rench industrial enterprises would pen up questions of policy which rould provoke an extended contro ersy in Congress.

The first business on the reopening is the passage of a bill empowering the British government to carry out the Irish treaty by appointing an Ulster member to the boundary commission. it is believed Uniter will accept the findings of the commission and take it as the basis for further negotiations along the lines indicated by dispatches recently for a full unit of Ireland.

The next question in importance is the Russian treaty, which, to become effective, must be approved by Parliament. In any case, it is now expected that Prime Minister MacDonald will announce that he leaves the treaty to a free vote of the House and will not make acceptance or rejection a matter of confidence. In such a case defeat would not necessitate the resignation of the government. This, of course, would be agreeable to both the conservatives and liberals, neither of whom are anxious to force a general election now, in which they stand to lose rather than gain.

Washington is the recipient of a soft schedule that should result in their being undefeated at the close of the season, barring injuries and such unforseen breaks of the game.

The Southern California Intercollegiate Conference also gets underway today with all but the local University of California and Redlands elevens starting work. Pomona and Caltech tied for the title last year.

Here's the way Eugene W. Nixon, Pomona mentor and one of the smartest coaches in the south today, sizes up the conference:

But the first game was the real thriller. Griffin had held the Angels helpless for seven innings while the Seals had gathered three runs off Root, two of which were unearned, and most of the fans had just about given up hope for Krug to pull the game out of the first. But Marty used a little strategy in the eighth and finally sneaked out a victory.

The Seals picked up their first run in the fourth when Rhyne doubled against the left-field wall, took third on Mulligan's sacrifice and scored when Spencer threw wild to third in an attempt to pick Hal off the hot corner. In the sixth the Seals chalked up two more and all looked lost. After Griffin had been retired, Valla singled to left and was safe at second when Krug took Rhyne's bounder and tossed low to second. Mulligan fanned, but Bert Ellison lifted a high fly against the score board for two bases and both men counted.

"BAD MAN" AND

She Calls Help as Gunman's Love is Spurned

Contable and Aide Are Met by Hail of Bullets

The romance of Gus Le Brun, panish, French and Indian "bad nan" of the Newhall Mountains, ended yesterday in tragedy for himself and another. LeBrun was shot dead and Deputy Constable shot dead and Deputy Constable Ed Brown of Saugus died later in the General Hospital here after a game fight for life, with the chances all against him. The cause of the tragedy was Miss Nellie Bayles, who used the stage name of Bonita Darling, a former actress and present pigeon fancier on her small hillside ranch covered with greasewood and scrub cak.

Le Brun, according to evidence

Le Brun, according to evidence lisclosed by the investigation of disclosed by the investigation of Capt. They appear to have been engaged, or at least Le Brunthought so, but some time last week she told him finally she would not marry him. This precipitated a quarrel that brought in the authorities on Miss Darling's complaint.

VOICES THREAT

The well driller intended, the authorities judged from a letter he left behind him, to slay Miss Darling and then himself, but seems not to have been able to bring himself to the point of harming her. He appeared at her cabin and made threats Friday night, after having been warned away by Constable Plieher, and Saturday Miss Darling appealed again to Justice Miller at Newhall, who had Le Brun called in. The well driller asserted Miss Darling owed him money. She dnally compromised this claim by signing a note for $150. Saturday night Le Brun again appeared at her little Jungalow, somewhat the worse for liquor, and repeated his threats, declaring also he would "get" the officers if they came for him. So yesterday Miss Darling again appealed to the constable, and Pilcher and Brown went out, armed and expecting frouble. As they came near the ranch they were halled by Le Brun, hidden behind a brush, and warned to stop. They ducked and drove ahead, and Le Brun opened fire with a repeating rifle. VOICES THREAT

WHO IS TO BLAME?
One of The Times family of readers who signs himself "A Political Observer" has written a strong letter of protest be-cause he found in a recent editorial the statement that "In the last ten years working hours in this country have been reduced at least 10 per cent, while wages have in creased more than 100 per cent." He writes:

Wages have been increased 100 per cent, sure; but rents have increased 100 per cent, sure; but rents have increased 100 to 250 per cent and food from 100 to 250 per cent and other things from 100 to 500 per cent. Clothes ready made from 100 to 200 per cent. Women's things the same way. . . . Although wages have gone up for wage-earners, they have had to pay it all out again for increased cost of living, and they are no better off today than ever. This "observer" waxes indignant because

This "observer" waxes indignant because wages and retail prices have both moved upward, and the retail price often gets a commanding lead over wages. He seems to think that Congress could pass a law which would cause wages to go up and prices to come down.

The Times is surprised that one who

The Times that the wages of every workman must be paid by the thing he produces. When prices soar away from the cost of production competition brings them back to earth. # WHY QUIT GOING TO CHUN

BY ALMA WHITAKER

I have been reading in a current perienced and magazine why Rupert Hughes says with.

I have been reading in a current magazine why Rupert Hughes says he has quit going to church. He is a widely read writer, so that his state of mind is interesting. He seems to hate religion and more specifically the Christian religion.

This is not an attempt to answer him logically, intellectually. It would take a greater than I to do that.

I was born, baptized, confirmed, married and shall probably die an Except for a brief period in my girlhood, not a very devout one. For ten years in this city I never went to church at alligust a common backslider. Two years ago on a hot summer morning I heard the bell of St. Athansius from my garden and had a sudden impulse to go to church. I was so stirred by the devotion of the fifty or so people assembled there, the happiness that radiated from them, the ardent sincerity of the pastor and the wise and gracious sermen he preached that, as is the way with my profession. I was moved to write a newspaper story about it.

That was how I began my churchgoing pilgrimage and since then I have hardly missed a Sunday-visiting a different church and many and varied denominations each week. I have probably been to as many kinds of churches and sampled as many creeds as anyone in this town.

Now that is an experience not calculated to make one religious. One could so easily become cynical after a while—especially if one had an "intellectual complay." It

Now that is an experience not calculated to make one religious. One could so easily become cynical after a while—especially if one had an "intellectual complex." It is terribly easy to wax critical about some kinds of Christians or the proponents of any other creed. One often hears foolish prayers offered by officious and ignorant elders, violent, tawdry or merely standard of the complex fered by officious and ignorant elders, violent, tawdry or merely stupid sermons preached by semieducated parsons. Head of School of Screen Acting Accused of Making Students Buy Shares

Charged with conducting a school for aspiring motion-picture and actresses in which he made Dailey today will appear before Justice Scott to answer a charge of violating the Corporate Securibayda, who will prosecute the case. Dailey set himself as head of the Screen Artists' Productions Association, secured students for a school to teach the principles of acting and then persuaded his stu-acting and then persuaded his students to only interests in the association.

He failed, however, the complaint states, to comply with rules of the Corporation Commission requiring him to secure a Loense for the sale and to make periodical statements to his stockhoiders of the profits or losses. It is stated in the complaint that he paid no dividends out of more than $5000 profit, and made no report to his shareholders.

Miss Vol.cell Eslick, 771 South Catalina street, bought several shares but later appeared at the District Attorney's office and swore to a complaint against Dalley. She will testify today.

TROTTER'S ADVENTURE

The constable from the old home town dropped in yesterday, but bore no news of importance. "Pretty good pasture and plenty of pond water," he said. "Nothin' in the way of public improvements, 'cept Abe Trotter started plantin' the flagpole in the Civic Park last Monday. He risged up a little seat on a rope that run up through a pulley at the top o' the pole, and had some of the fellers to pull him up so he could paint from th' top down. The feflers pulled him up, and held him a while till three of them had to go to dinner, so they tied the rope to a hitchrack across the street, aimin' to come back after dinner and let him down a notch.

"Durin' the noon hour somebody in a flivver come up to the hitchrack, not seein' the rope that was holdin' Abe up, and hit it at about, I reckon, twenty miles an hour, and shot Abe up over th' top o' the pole like out of a cannon. Abe kept his seat, though, and wrapped hisself around th' pole and slid down easy to where he was before. But he wiped most o' the paint off at the top, and allowed it would have to be done over, if th' city would stand th' expense, though it don't show hardly at all to a feller standing the ground. But Abe says he never liked to turn out a sloppy job, so I guess th' fellers 'll pull him up again and 'et him put on another coat before he finishes."—[Kansas City Star.

Hardening Rails After Laid
The first application in America of the process of hardening railway rails after they have been laid is reported from Toronto, according to the Electric Railway Journal. A blowpipe is mounted on wheels and passed over the surface of the rail at a speed that gives a temperature of $50 degrees centigrade to all points heated.
Immediately after heating, a jet of water is played upon the rail, the effect, being to harden the surface and prolong its wearing qualities. The process is effective to a depth of an inch, according to the pressure used in the blowpipe.
